"We have met before, it seems," he said, after the first interchange of civilities was over; "but I did not think our acquaintance would be renewed in this manner."

No answer from Theo, who like many others, had taken a dislike to this month, and felt puzzled to know whether he intended ridiculing her or not.

"As you probably know, I left Worcester on Tuesday morning for the purpose of collecting some bills in this neighborhood. Arrived at Hillsdale, I procured a horse, and was sauntering leisurely through the woods, when I came suddenly upon a flying witch in the shape of a beautiful young girl. She was the finest rider I ever saw, and such a chase as she led me, until at last, to my dismay, she leaped across a chasm, down which a nervous little creature like you would be afraid to look. Not wishing to be outdone, I followed her, and, as a matter of course, broke my bones."

even allowing a substantial sum for depreciation, out of the proceeds of her investments abroad. France was able to carry on the war for two or three years at least out of the proceeds of her investments abroad. And both countries would have still something to spare to advance to their allies. It was a most important consideration. At the present moment the allies were fighting the whole mobilized strength of Germany, with perhaps less than one-third of their own strength. The problem of the allies was to bring the remaining two-thirds of their resources into the

The speaker then declared there was a satisfactory amount of gold in London. "If, however, our gold reserves fall far below a certain point—pretty point—the banks of France and Russia will to the banks of our assistance," Mr. Lloyd-Gorger said.

Russia had agreed to facilitate the export of the products required by the allied countries.

BRITAIN'S RESPONSE

Two important speeches were delivered in the Imperial Parliament yesterday—one by Winston Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, and the other by Lloyd-George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. These were in the nature of replies to Germany's challenge to Great Britain's naval power.

Churchill's speech was a masterpiece of statesmanship. He declared that the British fleet was the greatest in the world, and that it was the duty of the British government to maintain it. He also declared that the British government was prepared to meet any challenge to its naval power.

Lloyd-George's speech was equally important. He declared that the British government was prepared to meet any challenge to its financial power. He also declared that the British government was prepared to meet any challenge to its moral power.

The British government's response to Germany's challenge was a masterpiece of statesmanship. It was a response that was both firm and fair. It was a response that was both strong and wise.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Positively Warner Here took a hint too much.

We may yet hear that the jitters has not yet taken the war zone.

Hamilton might also have been prepared for its annual clean-up week.

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE

The key to the situation is in the hands of the people. They are the ones who must decide whether or not they will support the war effort.

The people's voice is the voice of the future. It is the voice that will decide whether or not we will win the war.
